Definitions

Position Description (PD)	A Position Description lists the Position Title, Location, Functions and Tasks, Relationships, Limits of Authority and Performance Measures including Quality and Health and Safety responsibilities and includes a Position Specification.
----------------------------------	---

Procedure

1: Recruitment & Selection

- When recruitment need is identified (i.e. someone leaves, resourcing gap) approval for recruitment must be obtained
- All positions being recruited should have a current Position Description (PD). If a PD does not exist one can be created either by:
 - Working with the relevant person to update an existing PD or
 - Prepare one using the Position Description Template (FOR_04)

Advertising the Position

- Once the PD and/or Person Specification has been finalised the next step is to advertise for the position. There are a number of mediums to advertise the position:
 - Determine the most appropriate method of attracting applicants - internal advertising, external advertising through electronic media such as Seek or LinkedIn, employee recommendations, head hunting or previous applicants
 - is mindful of the legalities surrounding advertising a vacancy and will comply with the relevant Anti Discrimination legislation.
 - Prepare the recruitment advertisement and seek approval if relevant
 - Any tax invoices relating to the cost of recruitment will be passed to the appropriate person for approval

- As applicants send in resumes an acknowledgement letter (FOR09) or email should be used as an initial response
 - A shortlist will then be formulated, taking into consideration; Appropriate Workplace Behaviours Policy (POL01), selection criteria and competencies based on the PD.
 - For shortlisted employees it is recommended a Pre Employment Form (FOR01a) is sent to the candidates to complete before they are phone screened or interviewed. This form will allow you to investigate information that is relevant to the role
 - Prepare questions using the phone screening interview guide (FOR1b) and conduct phone interviews (if necessary or relevant) with the candidates on the shortlist. Those candidates that meet the essential criteria including relevant experience, aligned salary expectations, great phone manner etc. should be placed on the short list, and those that don't should be removed
 - Using information gained from phone screening, a further shortlist needs to be made for face-to-face interviews with suitable candidates

Conducting Interviews

It is essential to prepare properly for each face to face interview. This is 's opportunity to present itself to potential applicants as a great place to work. Often the interview is just as much about the candidate interviewing . A structured interview will allow you to control the time you have with the candidate so ensure all applicants are given sufficient time to ask the questions you wish to ask.

- After shortlisting, successful candidates should be contacted to arrange appointment times. Don't forget to advise them what they need to bring to an interview (if relevant).
- The necessary preparations for face to face interviews will need to be made – questions, book room, who should be present, prepare organisation portfolio and handouts (if appropriate) and determine if they need to complete:
 - Psychological Profiling
 - Aptitude Test
 - Computer Test
 - Pre-employment Medical Assessment

Note: The above tests may not necessarily be carried out for all roles.

- The interviewer should use FOR01c to prepare for the interview as well as including any additional questions that may be required to be asked of the candidate. The interviewee may refer to FOR1d which contains tips for interviews and what you can and can't legally ask a candidate
- As necessary, a second interview should be arranged for preferred candidates
- The second interview may involve meeting other key people and/or other staff and a tour of the work environment

Reference checks should be carried out to provide further insight into how suitable a candidate may be for the job, and how they have performed in previous roles in a similar field. There are particular areas in which you will be interested in finding out factual information about the applicant. For example their honesty and reason for leaving their previous employment which are best confirmed by a third party. It is also important to ensure that permission is sought from the candidate before you contact the referees.

- Carry out at least 2 phone reference checks with most recent Manager/Supervisor of the candidate using the Reference Check Form (FOR12)
 - Review interview notes, reference check information and assessments when making the final selection decision
 - Seek final approval from all the relevant parties to hire the candidate
 - Make an offer to successful candidate, once they have accepted and confirmed, notify all applicants of outcome
 - The unsuccessful interviewees will need to be phoned and sent an unsuccessful letter/email using the Unsuccessful Recruitment Letter (FOR9a) form to notify them that the position has been filled
 - A record of assessment of each applicant should be made immediately after the interviews. Details of photocopies of documents taken may also be noted on this record
 - Ensure that all applications are then stored in either hard or soft copy for a period of 3 months
 - The successful candidate should then be contacted to arrange starting date and time
 - Send 'new starters' package including:
 - Employment contract and a copy to be returned
 - Payroll Authority Form (FOR01)
 - Personal Details Form (FOR02)
 - Confidentiality Agreement (FOR07)
 - Email/Internet/Social Media sign off (FOR08)
 - Superannuation - Standard Choice Form (ATO)
 - TFN Declaration Form (ATO)
 - NES (National Employment Standards) document (Fair Work Australia)
 - All forms should be returned on the employees first day and will be kept in a confidential personnel file.
 - Carry out induction as per procedure (PRO06) and ensure Induction Form (FOR06) is completed and placed in the personnel file.

2: End of Probationary Period Review

When the employee has completed 3 months of employment, a formal review is carried out using the following process:

- Review carried out as per Probationary Period Review form (FOR17)
 - It's important at this point that any areas of concern are raised, if any
 - If the employee is successful in passing probationary period, a Probationary Period Letter (FOR17a) is signed, given to employee and a copy is kept in their personnel file
 - If there is reason/cause for an extension of the probationary period, clear explanations and expectations in relation to expected behaviour/performance need to be given and new review date set in 3 months time. An Extension of Probationary Period Letter (FOR17b) needs to be prepared, signed and a copy kept in their personnel file
